3. CONTINUOUS DISCLOSURE

3.1 What information does the Company have to disclose?

As required by the Corporations Act 2001 (Cth) and the Australian Securities Exchange (ASX) Listing Rule 3.1, once the Company is or becomes aware of any information that a reasonable person would expect to have a material effect on the Company's share price, the Company must "immediately" (meaning promptly and without delay) disclose the information to ASX. This information is typically referred to as "market sensitive information" and there are criminal and civil penalties for non-compliance. It is not possible to exhaustively list the information which must be disclosed.

3.2 When is information "market sensitive"?

Information is deemed to be "market sensitive" if a reasonable person would expect that such information would have a material effect on the price or value of the securities of the Company.

A reasonable person is taken to expect information to have such an effect if the information would, or would be likely to, influence persons who commonly invest in securities in deciding whether or not to buy those securities. ASX Guidance Note 8 suggests asking the following two questions:

- (a) Would this information influence my decision to buy or sell securities in the entity at their current market price?
- (b) Would I feel exposed to an action for insider trading if I were to buy or sell securities in the entity at their current market price, knowing this information had not been disclosed to the market?

Where the Company has provided earnings or other guidance to the market, a material difference between its actual or projected outcomes and that guidance may constitute a "market sensitive" earnings surprise.

Other matters to consider in determining materiality also include whether a matter:

- (a) will significantly damage the Company's image or reputation;
- (b) will significantly affect the Company's ability to carry on business in the ordinary course; or
- (c) involves a serious breach of any law or regulation.

Any Personnel who is unsure as to whether they are in possession of "market sensitive" information, should immediately inform the Company Secretary so that advice can be given and a formal decision made as to whether or not to release the information.

3.3 When does the Company become aware of information?

The Company becomes aware of information if Personnel have, or ought to reasonably have come into possession of the information in the course of their duties with the Company. Personnel who becomes aware of information which they would consider could trigger a disclosure obligation should contact the Company Secretary. Personnel must act as expeditiously as possible, because while information of a raw or un-reviewed nature may not of itself be such as to trigger a disclosure obligation for the Company, the size or timing of information may result in it being significant, either alone or in combination with other factors.

3.4 What does "disclose immediately" mean?

Immediately means promptly and without delay. This means doing it as quickly as can be done in the circumstances (acting promptly) and not deferring, postponing or putting it off to a later time (acting without delay).

Are there any exceptions to the requirements to disclose immediately?

The disclosure of such information does not apply to particular information while all of the following are satisfied:

- (a) a reasonable person would not expect the information to be disclosed;
- (b) the information is confidential; and
- (c) one or more of the following conditions apply:
 - (i) it would be a breach of the law to disclose such information;
 - (ii) the information concerns an incomplete proposal or negotiation;
 - (iii) the information contains matters of supposition or is insufficiently definite to warrant disclosure;
 - (iv) the information is generated for the internal management purposes of the Company; or
 - (v) the information is a trade secret.

3.5 Confidentiality

If information is not disclosed because of the reliance on the confidentiality exceptions referred to above, the confidentiality requirement must be satisfied at all times. Every Personnel has a duty not to disclose confidential information to any person except with the express consent of the Company, or in circumstances required by law. In determining whether any information that comes to light about the Company needs to be released, it will be necessary to determine whether the conditions permitting non-disclosure apply. In particular, a determination may need to be made as to whether the information is confidential.

3.6 Disclosure of market sensitive information

The determination as to whether or not to disclose information to the ASX is to be made by the Executive Chairman and or Managing Director, with legal or other advice if necessary. Where information is to be disclosed, the Company Secretary will draft an ASX announcement document which will be communicated to all Directors for review and immediate disclosure. Information contained within the announcement will be factual and presented in a clear and balanced manner.

4. PUBLICATION OF POLICY

This Policy is made available to all Personnel and published on the Company website at: www.strikeresources.com.au/corporate-governance
